Jefferson records 106th COVID-19 death

BY BOB DEMAREE

Jefferson County's COVID-19 death toll increased by one on Friday and Superintendent Jeffrey Bates announced on Thursday that Southwestern schools will be going virtual next week due to staffing issues related to the pandemic.

Beginning, Monday and continuing through Friday, Southwestern will hold classes on a virtual format due to a shortage of essential staff. Southwestern's winter break is Dec. 20-31, and Bates said the plan and hope is that Southwestern will return to regular in-person learning on campus beginning Monday, Jan. 3.

Bates said the issue is with the number of essential staff, such as teachers, aides, nurses and custodians, who are having to quarantine due to COVID-19 contacts with nursing being one of the main concerns. "We have too many staff out," said Bates, which prevents the school corporation from effectively serving students.

Bates said the decision to go virtual was not impacted by student COVID-19 cases, noting currently only 15% of the students are out for quarantine. He said while that number isn't good, it is not high enough to shut down in-person classes and since the school's issue is with staffing rather than students, Bates said extra-curricular activities will continue to take place as scheduled.

He said one other possibility for dealing with the staffing shortage would be to combine classrooms, "but that goes against what we're trying to do to stop the spread" by putting more students in a space together, but getting substitute teachers for those who are out on quarantine has been difficult.

"I don't like for us having to go virtual," Bates said, "but I don't think we have any other option at this point."

Calling school weather delays can be difficult

BY BOB DEMAREE

With Wednesday's Madison School Board meeting coinciding with the snowfall of the winter in Jefferson County, Superintendent Dr. Jeffrey Studebaker talked about the challenges he faces in deciding whether to delay the start of the school day due to road and weather conditions.

Studebaker said when a two-hour delay is called, it's typically for two reasons. One is when it's really cold and there's a little bit of slickness on the road, a delay can provide enough daylight to better see road conditions. The other is "to buy ourselves some time to see what's going on and whether the county can get the roads cleared."

He said if roads can't be cleared in a timely fashion a two-hour delay will sometimes turn into a call for a virtual school day.

In explaining what occurred Wednesday, Studebaker noted there were schools to the north of Jefferson County that initially went with a two-hour delay, and then switched to a virtual school day. "When they were trying to make the call, it was 50-50," he said. "The roads were slushy and they decided to go ahead and do a two-hour delay, and then as everyone was driving on the slushy, it compacted the ice. So with us not doing a two-hour delay, we actually got our folks in, and we had no issues with our buses and our drivers."

"Weather calls are brutally difficult," Studebaker said, noting the easiest decisions are when there are several inches of snow the night before. "I hate fog because is going to be bad in one location and not another."

Studebaker said the decision on Wednesday was more difficult north of Jefferson County, and that it is also more challenging for those communities with roads in hilly areas.

"As always, we tell our parents if you don't feel safe putting a kid on a bus, if you don't feel safe driving in, then stay home, and that would be an excused absence," Studebaker said.

In other business:

- Studebaker noted that Wednesday was his four-year anniversary as superintendent of Madison Consolidated Schools.

"My first board meeting was the night we approved the first expansion on Anderson" Elementary, he said. "It has been an honor to serve Madison Consolidated

Early data from parking study in Better management of existing parking seen as solution

BY BOB DEMAREE

Members of Madison's Redevelopment Commission received an initial report on a downtown parking study at their meeting Thursday.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said recommendations and more complete report will be made in January by HWC Engineering, the firm hired to do the study, but that he wanted to update the Redevelopment Commission because it provided funding for the parking study.

Courtney noted that due to commerce and tourism in downtown Madison, it was important to analyze the supply and demand for parking, and to steer the city in the best direction to determine investments and policy changes that might more effectively manage the parking inventory.

Nicole Schell, director of planning for the city, said HWC was in the city with a drone on three different days over the course of two weekends — Thursday, Oct. 14; Friday, Oct. 22; and Saturday, Oct. 23 — with the area studied covering Third Street to First Street between Broadway Street and East Street with data collected every hour between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. on those days.

Courtney said they decided that was the corridor needing the most extensive evaluation because that's where parking needs seem to be the greatest. "We know we can't evaluate the whole downtown," Courtney said, adding "It's not needed to evaluate the entire downtown."

In the corridor surveyed, 1,603 total parking spaces were identified with 636 of those off-street and the remainder being on-street spaces. On Thursday, the peak hour was at noon with 48.8% of spaces occupied. On Friday, the peak was also at noon with 53.3% spaces occupied. On Saturday, the peak was at 3 p.m. with 53.1% of spaces occupied.

"Even in peak times, we're barely using 50% of our inventory, and the relevance there is it doesn't mean that you always have a parking spot in front of where you want to park, but what you'll see in January when we look at it in a much more detailed way, we can tell you exactly where the peak parking was, and how close to the

Madison to finalize water rates later this month

Adjustment needed to fund $15 million in improvements

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Hoping for a larger commitment of funds from county government, the City of Madison has delayed finalizing water rate increases to be passed on to customers to fund a planned $15 million drinking water improvement project, but that will change soon because the time for delays has ended.

Madison Utilities Manager Brian Jackson told city council on Tuesday the hope at first was that the city would receive a grant to pay for much of the project. Later the city appealed to the Jefferson County Commissioners to contributed $2.5 million to the proposal. But with the grant application now rejected and the county pledging only $100,000, the time has come to finalize the rate increase and begin breaking the news to customers.

"We hope to wrap it up very soon," Jackson said, so funding can be secured and work can begin as scheduled. The project will include replacing about 22,000 lineal feet of water lines and making improvements to storage facilities, both routine maintenance that is long overdue.

According to Jackson, the grant program was extremely competitive with funding targeted for water districts with the most need who were passing on the highest rates to customers. Since Madison's 4,000 gallon water minimum costs customers $9.48 monthly and many districts charge $70 or more for the same amount of water, Madison was way below the line needed for funding. He said Madison currently makes all the water most customers use daily for about 25 cents per household and the city's average utility bill is about $40 for water, sewage, trash collection, recycling and compost.

Still, taking on a $15 million debt will have an impact. Although local customers will still pay less than most communities in the state — and many neighboring communities — there will be rate

Meanwhile, the Indiana Department of Health announced on Friday another COVID-19 death in Jefferson County, the 106th during the pandemic. Numbers remained unchanged for Carroll County with 32, Trimble County with 25 and Switzerland County with 13.

Jefferson County's positive cases now total 6,139, an increase of 98 since Wednesday, with a 12.7% positivity rate. Switzerland County's total positive cases are 1,520, an increase of 15 since Wednesday with a 15.9% positivity rate.

In Trimble County, there have been 13 new cases of COVID-19 in the last two days for 1,389 overall with a positivity rate of 14.91%. Carroll County has had 22 new positive cases in the last two days for 2,186 overall. Carroll's positivity rate is 11.76%.

Friday's statistics released by the Indiana Department of Health showed 5,315 new positive cases of COVID-19, increasing the overall total to 1,150,899 with 49 new deaths to push the overall death toll to 17,400. In Kentucky, there were 2,736 new cases of COVID-19 reported, bringing the overall total to 808,148. Kentucky's death toll is now 1,479 with 61 new deaths reported.

increases and the work now is to determine how big the hit will be.

"While there will be a rate increase I think it will be manageable compared to statewide averages," said Mayor Bob Courtney, who has lobbied repeatedly for more county support since Madison Water actually services about 75% of the county and may have as many or more customers in the county as the city by providing water to multiple rural water companies.

Jackson said he and the accountants held out hope for a larger contribution from county government but with that looking less likely they will now move forward with rates based on the $100,000 pledge which he said is small enough to be "negligible."

At the same time, both he and Courtney said once rates are established, they plan to "have another discussion" with the county to relay the proposed rates and how a larger contribution could still impact monthly water bills of residents for years to come.

In other reports, Madison Streets Superintendent Tony Sorrels updated the council on seasonal leaf collection to date, noting that 131 tons of leaves have been collected by two crews provided by the Indiana Department of Correction's local women's correctional unit.

Sorrels said the department does not have a leaf pickup schedule because there are too many factors involved but that once residents have leaves collected and at the curb to call the city and be placed on the collection list. He said it seems like the downtown area gets more attention that the hilltop, and in fact it does, but with 90% of the city's storm sewers in the downtown area, efforts must be made to keep drains cleared to prevent flooding.

Sorrels added that Corrections has indicated interest in extending its contract with the city to provide labor crews and that he is in favor of that arrangement. He also added that the city's snow plows are installed on trucks and ready to respond for winter weather emergencies.

PARKING

peak parking was there available parking, and in all instances there was parking generally adjacent to the area had the highest demand," Courtney said.

He said there has been some discussion on whether the city needs to invest in a downtown parking structure but, based on the data so far, one is not needed. Courtney said it's a matter of better managing the existing parking.

"What we're needing to look at is how do we manage the inventory that we have," he said.

Schell said the section that is most full is Main and Second streets between West and Mulberry streets where 75 on-street spaces are occupied at a peak of 86.9% on Thursday, 92% on Friday and 102.7% on Saturday. Schell said she wasn't sure how the Saturday figure calculated to more than 100%, but Courtney explained that the data was collected on a Saturday when there was much activity in that area with the Madison Area Arts Alliance celebrating completion of the Mulberry Murals.

Schell said it does indicate that "a large portion of our on-street parking is utilized" but she noted there are other areas where spaces are under-utilized such as the Jefferson Street parking lot, which Courtney said is downtown Madison's largest parking area and the least used.

"There really is availability downtown, it's just about the capacity of visitors and how we manage those spaces," said Schell.

Courtney said the city will use the data and work with the engineers to come up with actions on how to address the central core of the downtown business district where parking is closest to capacity.

Commission President John Grote asked as downtown buildings "fill out and vacant buildings become filled and used, especially with where we want to go with Madison Music Movement, how does this study coincide with that and the planned use that we want for the downtown area? Will we be able to support more open businesses there bringing in customers?"

"We can accommodate that additional growth of businesses in those corridors" if the inventory is managed correctly, said Courtney. "You may have to walk half-a-block or a little bit, but it is certainly giving us the conclusion that a parking structure isn't needed. A parking structure could cost $4 to $5 million. So, now we have got to figure out if we're not going to build a parking structure, how do we get people to where they should be where parking is available?"

He said one answer is to provide directional signage, which he said currently does not exist. "When a visitor comes to our community and they drive into the area, they see a lot full, they don't know the community well enough to know where to go. There's a lot of options that we're going to be exploring to help manage the inventory better."

My wife's vaping drives me up the wall

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My husband works with a guy, "Dave." I met Dave's girlfriend, "Julie," last summer, and she's a sweet, earnest, trusting person. She and I became friends, and we text and meet for coffee when we can.

Dave has been really unkind to her in public (my husband witnessed this a few times), and he's said some shockingly cruel things to her. She finally broke up with him a few weeks ago but, being a sensitive and romantic soul, is feeling torn and wistful.

My husband tells me that Dave has been bragging at work about hooking up with girls all over town and also with Julie because "she was available." He also said he hates condoms and doesn't use protection. I'm concerned for my friend's safety. If Dave reaches out to her and wants to reconnect, she'll possibly be open to it again and won't realize he's putting her at risk.

Should I tell her about his behavior? She'll be hurt, and it will certainly cause drama and make things awkward for my husband at work. Maybe Dave and Julie have cut all contact now. On the other hand, she knows him better than she knows me. What do you think? None of my business? Or is it wrong to stay silent? — No Drama Mama

Dear No Drama: Although it's a new friendship, I'd say your relationship with Julie trumps the one your husband has with a schmuck of a co-worker like Dave. And if it involves a potential risk to her personal health — information Dave likely will not volunteer if they do rekindle a relationship — Julie should know one way or the other.

Gently let Julie know the gist of what you've heard. (Fewer gory details means less risk of trouble at work for your husband.) With this new information, Julie can make a more informed decision about Dave. And if she decides he's history, you may have been what saved her from more headaches, heartache or worse.

Dear Annie: I stopped smoking cigarettes completely in 2014. My wife eventually did the same, however, she picked up one nasty, terrible habit: vaping.

I cannot stand the smell of it. It drives me crazy, yet she continues to smoke around me in the house. I turn the fans on when she does, but it still inundates the room, and she doesn't have enough respect not to smoke in the house.

If she were smoking cigarettes, she wouldn't do so in the house, so why is vaping any different? I think it shows great disrespect by not honoring my request. — Smokeless Spouse

Dear Smokeless: Kudos to you for kicking the nicotine; as for your wife, she's traded one bad habit for another.

What she does all alone by herself is one thing, but in common spaces, she has to compromise with everyone else. If she insists on continuing to vape, she has to do so where others won't be bothered by it. Just as you can't make her stop vaping, she can't make you comfortable with something you're not.

Though it's not the same as smoking, vaping comes with health risks of its own, and your wife should be aware of them. If she wants to put her own health at risk, that's up to her, but when it comes to that of her loved ones, she has to understand and respect their desire to escape the vape.

A man's loss touches readers

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am asking you to reprint your column with the letter from "Neil," who lost his wife to cancer and was having a difficult time coping with his grief. I am giving my copy to my brother-in-law, as he lost his wife, my sister, to glioblastoma, a type of brain cancer, Nov. 1. Now I would like to have another copy. — Kansas Karol

Dear Kansas Karol: I'm so sorry for your loss. Many were touched by Neil's letter. Here it is.

Dear Annie: I am a 69-year-old man who, until now, only read your column periodically. Each time I read your advice to someone, I would say to myself, "Hmm, that's really good advice." I never ever thought that I would need to write to you. Well, now I am eating those words.

In late August, I lost the most important person in my life to inoperable pancreatic cancer. My wife was diagnosed in June 2014, and despite the fact that the cancer spread to three additional organs, she fought back. This amazing woman refused to let the cancer win. She went on with her life, and even though she received chemo and radiation therapy on a regular basis, as well as numerous medications, she refused to give in.

I drove her to every doctor's appointment and every radiation and chemotherapy appointment, as well as all over the country as we searched for clinical trials. However, after two-plus years, her fragile body could fight no longer, and she died in my arms.

The reason I am writing to you is that I am a total mess. Friends and family are calling me to come to dinner. I don't want to be around people as I grieve; I prefer to be alone all of the time. Our house is just as it was on the day she died because I simply can't part with her things at this time. Yet seeing these things sends me into pain and sobbing sessions that may last for hours. I have completely lost faith in everything, and I don't trust professionals. I have joined several grief support groups, but I do not find solace in them yet.

My wife and I spent 50 years of our lives together. She was my best friend, my soul mate and my only love. Without her, I feel empty and incomplete. Although people keep telling me that things eventually will get better, I have my doubts. I am trying to take care of myself and to do the things I believe she would want me to do if she were still alive. The only thing I really have difficulty doing is sleeping. I would appreciate any advice you can offer. — Neil

Dear Neil: I know that nothing I say can reduce the enormity of your loss — that my response may come across as cliched or maybe even a little hollow — because in the face of such grief, words look ridiculous and small. Still, I must say, with all of my heart, that I am so sorry for your loss.

In these times of deep grief, turn to the memories you and your wife shared. Let them warm you through the night like a blanket. They are eternal. No one can ever take those away from you. Your wife lives on in your heart. Let her strength help you through this.

Be patient with yourself and permit yourself to grieve as long and as deeply as you need.

MADISON COURIER GIRLS CROSS COUNTRY RUNNER OF THE YEAR

Alderman's 'disappointing' season still among best

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

When you have the kind of high expectations that Calli Alderman has, a third straight appearance in the semistate can seem like a disappointment. But that's what happens when you've established yourself as one of the best runners in the state.

The Shawe High School junior was recently named Indiana Association of Track and Cross Country Coaches Class 1A Runner of the Year for the second straight year and she is this year's Madison Courier Girls Cross Country Runner of the Year for a third straight year.

But while Alderman appreciates the individual awards, she can't help but look at what she missed out on, namely a second-straight trip to the IHSAA State Finals.

"I'm a little disappointed. I do wish I would have made it to state, but I always just try harder," said the soft-spoken Alderman. "I definitely felt like I sorted out a lot slower my times and got a lot lower later in the season. That will be my goal for next year."

For the first time in her high school career, Alderman was seriously challenged for the Courier award. Switzerland County freshman Claire Rogers caught fire in midseason and over a three-week stretch, beat Alderman to win the Jac-Cen-Del Invitational, the Ohio River Valley Conference championship, and the IHSAA Sectional title.

However, Alderman regrouped to finish higher at the regional and semistate and said that the duel with Rogers was unexpected, but it also made her work harder.

Nina Campbell

Shawe High School junior Calli Alderman is The Madison Courier Girls Cross Country Runner of the Year.

"She kind of just popped up. I didn't really notice her or anything but she definitely pushed me," Alderman said of Rogers. "But I was able to kick it in gear at semistate and regionals."

As it turned out, the fast regional course at Ceraland near Columbus proved to be Alderman's best race. She posted a new personal record on the course by running a 19:12 to place fifth overall. At the semistate in Brown County, she missed state by one position, finishing 36th overall in 19:27.5 two spots ahead of Rogers.

"I got stuck in a pack at the beginning and it kind of put me in the back row. My time was just a little off," Alderman said of semistate. "There's so many people out there you just kind of get stuck in a spot. It's really hard to pick off people and get in front of them."

First-year Shawe coach Angela Wieczorek said she wasn't surprised by Alderman's success, especially after seeing the amount of hard work she puts in training.

"What makes Calli truly extraordinary is that her talent for distance running is a gift that has even more potential than what's been yet realized. She has a fierce competitive drive and has developed a respect and appreciation for the sport I am certain will help her continue to improve," Wieczorek said. "What I most enjoyed about coaching Calli this year was getting to know what a great young lady she is. She's kind, witty and a fantastic athlete."

Alderman already has her sights on next season. She has opted not to play basketball this year and plans to run track in the spring. Next fall she's determined to make one final push at her ultimate goal in cross country, a state championship.

"I definitely want to go into my season prepared. I want to start training a lot before my season, stuff like that, and do the little things," Alderman said.

"I want to do more races over the summer, stuff like that to get me more prepared and ready for the season."

Madison's Yancey named to 4A Junior All-State team

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Colin Yancey torched opposing defenses throughout the 2021 season and on Monday, the Madison Consolidated High School junior was rewarded by being named to the Indiana Football Coaches Association Class 4A Junior All-State football team.

Yancey caught 74 passes for 1,024 yards and 10 touchdowns this season for the 3-7 Cubs despite being the focus of opposing defenses in every game. Each of those stats were among the very best in the state.

"I really consider this a team award," Yancey said. "I put a lot of work in during the offseason to get faster and stronger, but I couldn't have done any of it without my teammates."

Yancey tallied more than 150 yards in four games this season, with a 12-catch, 165-yard night that saw him score three touchdowns against Cooper arguably his best of the year.

But he also had 10 catches for 161 yards and a score against South Dearborn in the regular season, eight catches for 154 yards and two touchdowns against Brownstown, and seven receptions for 155 yards and two touchdowns against Mitchell for some very big nights.

David Campbell

Madison's Colin Yancey, shown catching a pass against Brownstown this past season, has been named to the Indiana Football Coaches Association Junior Class 4A All-State Team.

"When you look at that list, whether it's single A up to 6A, a lot of these kids are coming from big schools or schools from the Indy area and to have a kid from rural Madison to get that award is special. That's big for the program and it's very big for him."

— Leroy Wilson
Madison football coach

Yancey's production tailed off toward the end of the season as opponents did everything they could to slow him down but 1,024 yards in just 10 games was still third-best in Class 4A, trailing only Ashden Gentry of Mount Vernon with 1,271 yards in 15 games, and Kyle Lockard of Roncalli with 1,094 yards in 12 games.

Yancey's 102.4-yards-per-game average led the state and his 74 receptions were second to only Chase Mabry of Martinsville, who had 98 in 12 games.

Yancey was 22nd in the state in overall receiving yardage regardless of class, eighth in yards-per-game and ninth overall in receptions.

Yancey joins Eli Ashton of East Central as the only two receivers on the Class 4A Junior All-State list. Six players were named to the Top 50 All-State team at receiver: Omar Cooper Jr., Lawrence North; Rory Heitsley, Gibson Southern; Chrishon McCray, Avon; Cael Vanderbush, Plainfield; Joe Walker, Warren Central; and Rowan Zolman, East Noble.

"When you look at that list, whether it's single A up to 6A, a lot of these kids are coming from big schools or schools from the Indy area and to have a kid from rural Madison to get that award is special," Madison football coach Leroy Wilson said. "That's big for the program and it's very big for him. The kid has worked his tail off since my first day on campus, but he

Trimble County boys pull away late to beat Carroll 72-61

BY LAUREN HANEY

Trimble County came out on top in a close game against rival Carroll County, 72-61 in boys basketball Thursday in Carrollton.

Carroll's young roster and a new coaching staff played neck-and-neck with Trimble County for all four quarters before the Raiders finally put the game away late.

"Coming into the game, I think that maybe we underestimated them just a little," Trimble head coach, Marcus Mumphrey said. "Carroll County did a great job. They kept the game relatively close and we did what we needed to do to win."

Carroll County, now 0-4, 0-1 North Central Kentucky, battled foul trouble throughout the game, and Trimble County scored 20 of its 72 points on free throws. Both teams committed numerous turnovers, leaving little room for organized offense on either side of the court.

"That's our biggest issue: staying mentally focused the whole game," Mumphrey said. "They're still learning how to finish a game or keep our lead or knowing when to back off and not do too

Switzerland blitzed from the start in 63-30 loss to Austin

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Austin blitzed out to a 25-0 lead less than six minutes into Thursday's game and never looked back, blowing out Switzerland County 63-30 in girls basketball in Vevay.

The Pacers, who were playing without senior starter Maddie Duvall, were never in the contest. Switzerland turned the ball over 10 times in the first eight minutes leading to numerous easy layups as the Eagles scored the game's first 25 points.

Jessie Duvall, Maddie's twin sister, finally broke up the shutout with a basket with 2:15 left in the first quarter, but Austin still led 27-5 after that period and 41-13 at halftime before cruising to the 32-point win.

Jessie Duvall scored 12 points to lead the Pacers while Macy Collier and Kenzie Taylor had four points each. Terra Oeffinger added three points.

The victory was just Austin's second on the season. The Eagles (2-7) opened the season with a 45-38 win over Madison before dropping seven straight.

Switzerland, now 8-2, travels to Shawe on Saturday night for a varsity-only game at 6 p.m. in the Pacers' Ohio River Valley Conference opener. The Swiss then head to South Ripley for a non-conference game on Tuesday.

COVID-19 concerns prompt Pacers, Raptors to cancel practices

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Pacers and Toronto Raptors canceled their Thursday practices in precautionary moves, citing the league's COVID-19 health and safety protocols.

Both teams made the announcements on Twitter.

Chicago forward Derrick Jones Jr. also entered the protocol Thursday, the fifth Bulls player in nine days to join the list.

And later Thursday, the Raptors announced that team president Masai Ujiri had tested positive for COVID-19 and was isolating at home.

Indiana has won twice this week — beating Washington on Monday and routing the New York Knicks on Wednesday. Pacers guard Justin Holiday has not played since entering the protocol on Nov. 30 and team officials have not yet said whether anyone else has been ruled out. Indiana is was scheduled to host Dallas on Friday.

The Raptors lost to Oklahoma City at home on Wednesday night and were scheduled to host the Knicks on Friday.

Toronto has not had any positive COVID-19 tests since the season began and the Raptors have said all of their players are fully vaccinated.

Ujiri said in a statement that he, too, is fully vaccinated and has received a booster shot. He said he attended an event on Sunday for his nonprofit Giants of Africa at which everyone was required to be vaccinated. Ujiri said after the gala, he learned that some guests had tested positive and he subsequently tested positive.

Does Your Social Security Just Go Away When You Die?

"Those planning their retirements should consider what, if any, Social Security benefits could be available if you are the spouse, child, or parent of a worker who dies." Steve Dybwad

Layin It On The Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/ Wealth Management

Many people planning for when they no longer work forget to include potential Social Security Survivors Benefits.

In 2021, workers can earn up to four credits per year, one credit for each $1,470 in wages or self-employment income. If a worker has hit $5,880 in wages, they have earned their maximum four credits the year.

How Do Those Credits Work?

Depending on a workers' age at the time of death, the number of credits necessary to provide survivors' benefits varies. The younger a decedent is, the fewer credits are needed for family members to get survivors' benefits.

When a worker dies, benefits may be disbursed to their children and the surviving spouse still caring for the children, even if that worker doesn't have enough credits. These survivors can receive benefits as long as the worker has credit for at least one and one-half years of work, or six credits, in the three years preceding their death. If there is no surviving spouse, payments typically go to a child eligible for benefits on the deceased worker's record. However, you will want to talk to a Social Security expert or claims representative about your options because of everyone's unique situations.

Who Can Get Monthly Survivor Benefits?

Typically, these family members are eligible to receive monthly benefits when you pass away.

- Your widow or widower who is at least age 60. Or a disabled widow or widower aged 50 or older.
- In certain strict circumstances, your surviving former spouse may be eligible.
- Your widow or widower of any age who is caring for your child younger than age 16. Or if disabled and receiving a child's benefits.
- An unmarried child aged 18 or 19 and a full-time student in elementary or secondary school.
- A child 18 or older with a disability that began before they turned 22 may qualify.

What Do You Do When A Family Member Passes Away?

As of 2021, you still cannot report that death or apply for survivors' benefits online. That's why you need to contact Social Security and your financial advisor as soon as possible. The funeral director will often report the death to Social Security if you have provided them with the deceased's Social Security number.

There may be instances when you want or need to speak to a Social Security representative directly. In that instance, you can call the SSA at 1-800-772-1213 during regular business hours.

What are some other considerations and caveats?

Suppose you don't have a surviving spouse. A one-time, lump-sum death benefit of $255 might be paid to your surviving spouse if they were living with the deceased. If you were living apart, the spouse still might qualify if they received certain types of Social Security benefits on your record. In that case, the death benefit goes to any child eligible for benefits on your record in the month of death.

Suppose you were already getting benefits when you died. In that case, your survivors must return the benefits you may have received for the month of death or any later months. For example, if you passed away in September, you must return all benefits paid in October. Be sure your loved ones know they should not cash any checks received for the month in which you died or later.

Summing it up: These are just some of the many rules, regulations, deadlines, and other nuances regarding Social Security survivor benefits. That's why it makes sense to sit with a qualified Social Security expert so that you have a basic game plan in place when you or your spouse passes away. Planning will give you and your loved ones greater peace of mind when you are no longer there to help them.

OHIO THEATRE ENDOWMENT

The historic Ohio Theatre is a valued piece of Madison's Main Street district. The Ohio has been here for decades of first dates and kiddie cartoons, and Jarrett Boyd hopes it will continue to be an anchor for downtown Madison. With that in mind, she established this Designated Fund because she sees the theatre's value not only for the "picture shows," but as a venue for local theatrical groups, speakers, or musicians. Imagine the possibility of an annual film festival! Jarrett has a warm place in her heart for the small-town movie due to earning spending money working the concession stand (like the one at the Ohio) during her junior year of high school. Annual grants from this fund will be made to the Friends of the Ohio Theatre organization to support the Ohio Theatre for years to come.

Please call Bill Barnes at 812-274-0241 for information about establishing a fund to support what matters most to you and those you love.

much when we already have the game. When we start trying to do too much then we give them a chance."

Carroll County's Braden Stephenson led the Panthers with a career-high 27 points followed by Landon Isaacs with eight, Andrew Shaw and Jaxon Hewitt both with seven,

Mitchell Lacefield scored five, Austin Hicks and Jake Ulrey each had three, and Kenyion Mumphrey scored one.

"Braden Stephenson played the game of his life. He played really, really well and distributed enough to get other people involved too. We have to be a balanced team so we had some guys make some shots and he distributed the ball to let them score," Carroll County head coach Doug Oak said. "We took a big step tonight in our effort and the way we played. We played much better but we still got a ways to go."

James Thomas Wilcoxson led Trimble County with 23 points followed by Hunter Kelly with 18 and Tate Ogburn with 15. Dalton Penick scored nine and Ethan Horn had seven.

The game was the 31st District opener for both teams.

Carroll returns to action today at Shelby County then the Panthers dip back into NCKC and district play with a road contest at Henry County on Monday.

Trimble, now 2-3, 1-0 NCKC, hosts Eminence on Monday for both a conference and 31st District contest.

wanted to be the best receiver to ever play at Madison and one of the best receivers in the state and that's what we're trying to do."

Yancey is just the sixth Madison player to earn all-state honors from the IFCA in the past 23 years, joining tight end Chad Liter (1998), wide receiver Danny Gibson (2001), offensive lineman Chad Taylor (2002), offensive lineman Ryan Lamb (2005) and defensive back Hunter Sego (2014).

All but Gibson, who was a Top 50 selection, were Class 4A picks.

In addition, both Gibson (2001) and linebacker Brenton Crane (2002) were Associated Press All-State selections. Gibson was a Mr. Football finalist.
